

Stop Killing Games

European Citizens' Initiative

Videogames are being destroyed! Most video games work indefinitely, but a growing number are designed to stop working as soon as Publishers end support. This effectively violates consumer rights, robs customers by depriving of their property, destroys games as an art form, and is unnecessary.

Our proposal would do the following:

- Require video games sold either in digital and/or physical format to remain in a working (playable) state after support by the Publisher ends.
- Require no connections to the publisher, for the games to function, after End-of-Support.
- Not interfere with any business practices by the Publisher while a game is still being supported. The Publisher shall enact an "End-of-Life" plan which shall be implemented after support for the game ends.

If you are an EU citizen, please sign the initiative now!

For more information, please check the below links:

European Citizen's Initiative
Website

Explanatory trailer
by EU Made Simple
Channel

FAQ Video

www.stopkillinggames.eu